Isn't it a Fact?

That the greatest force for the good of the public is the newspaper.

They are the leaders in making better business for the home town.

If some merchants would take the trouble to find out the amounts of money sent to mail-order houses from the home town, it would be a revelation.

It would make them up to the fact that in order to compete with the mail-order houses they should use the newspaper.

ADVERTISING!—The Magnet that Attracts

Mail-order houses appreciate the importance of advertising. That is why they get so much business in their cities.

They appreciate for advertising are necessary in their cities. They make these appreciations and that is why they get so much of the local merchants.

Attitudes Of Mind

It is reported in a daily newspaper that some distilleries existing as to whether the interior of the country is a certain old lady's name was employed and the owner finally reached that it was on the United States side. "So glad" expressed the old lady, "Canadian waters are so pure."

Traveling from the United States to Canada on one occasion, the writer observed a passenger remark just after the train had entered Canada: "We are so much sweeter and purer now that we are back in Canada."

Climate to these people was an attitude of mind, but, nevertheless, very real. It lends one, however, to wonder whether many people do not approach much of their daily activities, be it work or play, with some purely mental reaction.

On a day following the general election of July 28, at a meeting, one of our Saskatchewan friends, a strong Conservative by the way, declared that his business had already given over. He overlooked the fact that the few days before, conventions had in session to the city might have been somewhat to his day's gain. No, it was an attitude of mind with him, business had laid over just because the Conservatives had won the election.

It is the same with many in respect to hard times. Some people whose attitudes, or moods, or moods of mind, are the same now as they were in the boom days of the early '20s, and whose attitude of mind is much less, due to lower commodity prices, "hard" harder than many who actually suffer, they become terribly pessimistic and usually have on the high side of things and how difficult they are finding it to make ends meet.

Without the least discounting actual conditions, it is safe to say that with many people hard times is an attitude of mind, superadded, maybe, by fear of the real thing, rather than by the actual thing. Unfortunately, there are many who are faced with truly hard times and have concrete problems to solve and difficulties to overcome, but there is a multitude of people who are not actually in such a position, but whose attitude of mind is such that they are.

The influence of mind over matter is a well authenticated and recognized fact. Records in doctors' offices contain scores and hundreds of cases of people who have been cured of various ailments, and who have been cured by suggestion and by constantly and morbidly dwelling on their imagined ailment. The actuality did become chronic, however.

There is, too, that state of mind in certain people where suspicion or either without any cause or evidence to support such suspicion, but, having been once formed, anything, every word and act of such people, however innocent and innocent, and even the most innocent, is taken as evidence of the former.

Such attitude of mind are to be deplored, and their cultivation is to be guarded against by every individual. The harm done through constant thinking of unpleasant and evil things, and the harboring of thoughts of misanthropy, or even of violence, is incalculable.

It spreads like a miasm through society polluting the lives of whole communities. Fortunately, the reverse of this is also true. The cultivation of clean, bright and noble thoughts, the development of confidence in and love for one's neighbors, the cultivation of the habit of optimism, the light rather than the dark side of things, also spreads through society and uplifts and brightens the lives of all persons with whom a man and woman of that come in contact.

"Do you know," he broke in abruptly on this silent reverie, "I'm not so much of a snorer as you think me. I've been told that I snore like a steam locomotive. I know it's not true, but I don't care. I know it's not true, but I don't care. I know it's not true, but I don't care."

"Otherwise," smiled Gay, her face vanishing behind her coffee cup. "I infer that when you're snoring."

Nick laughed, but refused to answer this absurd question. Instead he said, sipping the coffee, "After a brook and a pine tree, so only that we can easily keep an eye on the river, though I don't mind seeing it."

"What am I to do here when I shall sit, if my last and master?" Nick interrupted fervently. "He raised and eyes to heaven. "Can call me her last and master?"
